

Awards held at new clubrooms

Awards: Warwick Webb, John Perry and Kevin Elms with the cheque.

MANDURAH Surf Life Saving Club held their annual awards presentation evening in their new clubrooms for the first time last month.

The building was buzzing with activity and excitement as nippers and parents alike enjoyed their new club building.

In celebration of the occasion there was face painting and balloons for all of the children while adults enjoyed champagne and appetizers.

As an opening gift the Madora Bay Partnership were proud to present the club with a cheque for $50,000 for the club to use at its discretion.

John Perry was present to hand the cheque over to a crowd of very appreciative club members.

“Being a beachside suburb, Madora Bay recognises the importance of providing emergency and first aid services to the community and also training our youngsters in water safety,” Mr Perry said.

“It is a great honour for Madora Bay to support the Mandurah Surf Life Saving Club.”

The new club rooms, which have just reached completion, are of great benefit to the club who provide education, training, surf sports, competition and family fun to the community.

The club rooms have a storage shed for boats and equipment, a function room, a meeting room, an office, a first aid area, a kiosk kitchen, change rooms, external public toilets, beach showers, a viewing platform and a carpark.

After many years of hard work and dedication, president Kevin Elms and past president Warwick Webb delivered a glittering presentation of trophies and awards in the new facilities.

The Mandurah Surf Life Saving Club will hold its social club room opening on June 14.
